

Miss American Indian Exposition

Kaitlyn Christine Kodaseet

Miss Kaitlyn Christine is the 17 year old daughter of Michael and Katie Kodaseet of Geary. She is also the granddaughter of Gary Kodaseet of Norman, Charlotte Lumpmouth of Geary and the late Joe and Fanny Charley of Pueblo Pintado, NM. Her Indian name is "hisei bee'ee netooxebio" which means Red Face Woman. It was given to her by her grandmother Fannie Charley when she was an infant.

In February 2010, she was selected to serve as the 2010 Arapaho Tribal Princess and represented her Arapaho people during the 79th Annual American Indian Exposition and the Miss AIE contest. She not only received the Miss Congeniality by her fellow tribal princesses but earned the title of Miss American Indian Exposition.

Miss Kodaseet has represented not only her Arapaho people extremely well but the American Indian Exposition as well. She thanks the Exposition for giving her this opportunity and helping her to not only be a better person but a well-respected young lady; and therefore will always be remembered as a "Queen".

Miss Kodaseet welcomes all the visitors and participants to the Exposition and hopes everyone has a good time.

Hohou (thank you)!
